Introduction from Coach Muñoz

Welcome to our HISD program, where we offer student-athletes the best opportunity to receive an internationally accredited education while also achieving their highest athletic potential. In our program, young athletes learn to understand the sport within an environment that emphasizes personal character, integrity, and respect for the game of baseball and all its participants.

Lamar baseball is committed to excellence on and off the field, beginning in the classroom. Among our baseball alumni, we can point to current students or graduates from universities including Columbia, Yale, Princeton, the US Naval Academy, West Point, Rice, the University of Houston, the University of Texas, Texas A&M, Sam Houston State, the College of William and Mary, Tulane, Texas Christian University, Texas Tech, and Trinity, among many others. Players from our current class of 2017 graduates have committed to play at schools including Texas A&M University, Baylor University, Villanova, The University of Houston and The University of Texas at Dallas.

Beyond the collegiate level, many Lamar baseball graduates play or have played for professional organizations such as the Philadelphia Phillies, Detroit Tigers, Tampa Bay Rays, and Washington Nationals. Lamar's program has produced four MLB first round draft picks and All-Americans from Rice University: Kenny Baugh ('97), Jeff Niemann ('01), Joe Savery ('04), and Anthony Rendon ('08).

The same standards and discipline that produced these professional players continue to develop the young men in our program today. We continue to challenge our student-athletes with high expectations and a process-oriented philosophy, which come together to prepare them for success not only at Lamar High School, but also through their college years and beyond.

Through the values it models and the results it expects, the baseball program at Lamar encourages players to realize their greatest potential in all areas of life. Simply stated, we practice excellence - on and off the field.

I would like to thank all of our players' families, our alumni, and the school administration for the support necessary to lead this program into the future as we move toward more championships and more academic achievements for our future student-athletes.

Sincerely,

David Muñoz

BILL POLAND FIELD

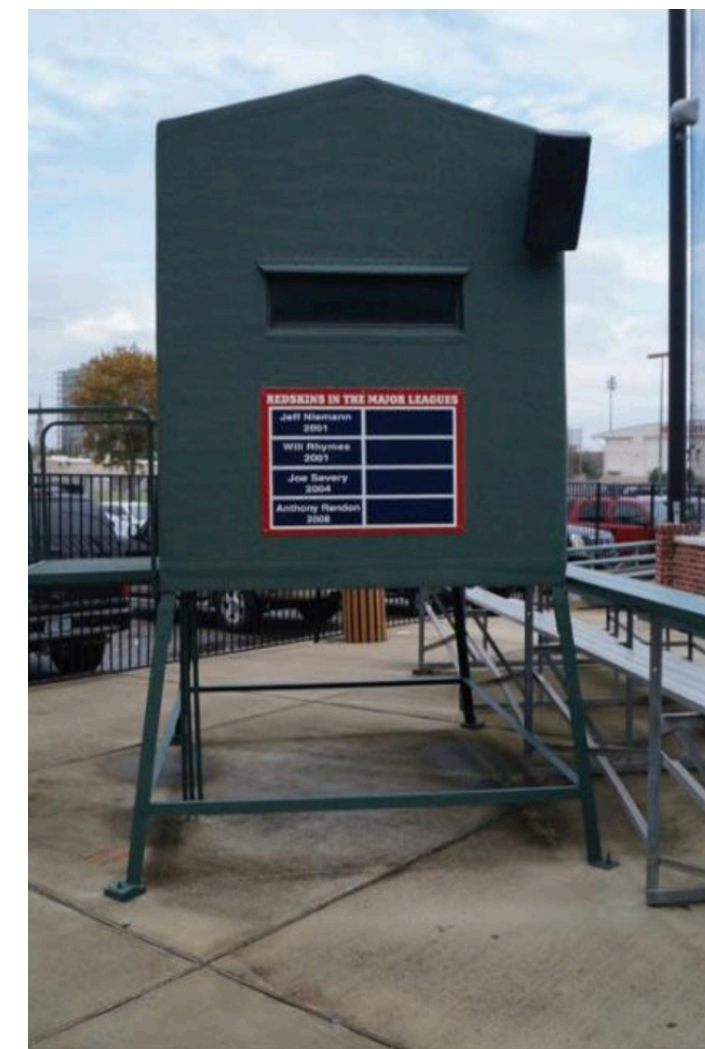

FACILITIES

Lamar Baseball boasts the Houston Independent School District's top high school baseball facility. They play on Bill Poland Field located on the Southwest corner of Lamar High School campus near the football and track fields.

In 2011 the baseball field and adjacent areas underwent a major renovation and now feature facilities that allow baseball players to work out year round on a professional quality field.

Bill Poland Field features dugouts, 2 bullpens, covered and uncovered cages, restrooms, concessions, seating for fans and a professional scoreboard. The covered 75 ft. batting cages are equipped with portable pitching mounds, four baseball pitching machines, metal halide floodlights and enough room for players to work on all their baseball skills rain or shine.

A WINNING TRADITION

*In the words of one college coach,
“Lamar players know how the game should be played.”*

Lamar Baseball has a rich history of producing well-trained players with a strong work ethic. Through the years, many different colleges and universities have signed Lamar players.

Rice University has experienced a wealth of success with former Lamar baseball players. Kenny Baugh ('98), Hunter Brown ('98), and Nick Martin ('98) each had outstanding careers at Rice. After Rice each was drafted by major league baseball teams: Baugh by the Detroit Tigers, Brown by the Seattle Mariners, and Martin by the Chicago Cubs. More recently Jeff Niemann ('01), Joe Savery ('04) and Anthony Rendon ('08) played for Rice and have gone on to play for major league teams. In 2011, Rendon was the No.6 draft pick by the Washington Nationals and in 2013 made his major league debut.

Princeton University has an established history of signing Lamar players. Former pitcher Christian Staehely ('04) and Seattle Mariners draftee, started the Princeton tradition followed by Adrian Turnham ('05), Brandon Englert ('06), Noel Gonzales-Luna ('06), and Sammy Gonzales-Luna ('12).

Virginia's College of William and Mary has recruited several Lamar players. Twin brothers Jon and Will Rhymes ('01) had stellar baseball careers with the Tribe. Will was drafted by the Detroit Tigers in 2005 and made his major league debut in 2010. In 2012 he played for the Tampa Bay Rays. Outfielder Ben Guez ('05) is currently playing with the Colorado Springs Sky Sox, a Milwaukee Brewers class AAA affiliate. Most recently James Williamson ('05) played for William and Mary and was the captain of the 2009 Tribe, Zach Pearson ('15) is a sophomore at William and Mary this season.

Yale University recruited David Toups ('11) and Chris Lanham ('12). John Fallon ('14) was recruited by Harvard University to play for The Crimson. His freshman year John was named the Ivy League's Player and Rookie of the Week. Fallon hit an incredible .706 (12-for-17) to lead the Crimson to a 4-1 record (3-1 Ivy) over the week of action at home. John slugged .824 with an OBP of .700 and never struck out in his 17 at bats, while drawing two walks. Fallon brought in nine runs and scored six more runs himself, adding three stolen bases to his stat sheet.

These are just a few of the schools that have recruited Lamar Baseball players, and numerous other schools have recruited Lamar players as well. In the words of one college coach, Lamar players “know how the game should be played.”

A two-way player at Rice University and standout on the mound at Lamar High School, John Williamson was drafted by the Chicago Cubs in the 2015 MLB Draft. The Cubs drafted a handful of college arms with bullpen experience and their 23rd pick from Rice provides the athleticism the Cubs like in their pitchers. At Rice John played in 53 of the team's 59 games, either as a pitcher, outfielder or designated hitter. He logged 20.1 innings on the mound over 15 appearances, finishing with a 3.98 ERA and holding opposing hitters to a composite .218 batting average. Williamson averaged 8.9 strikeouts per 9.0 innings and maintained a 3.3-to-1 strikeouts-to-walks ratio. He also hit .284/.352/.312 playing the outfield and DH.

Ian Gibaut became the first Tulane player selected in the 2015 MLB Draft when the Tampa Bay Rays picked him in the 11th round. The right-hander has a mid-90s fastball with a developing slider that helped him pick up nine saves as a junior in 2015. Tulane coach David Pierce said the 6-foot-3, 230-pound Gibaut “has to continue to redefine his body, but there is one thing that separates him from so many people in the country, and that's because he has a power arm,” Gibaut posted a 3.11 ERA with 51 strikeouts over 27 appearances and 46.1 inninqs as a junior. Gibaut made a strong impression as a freshman in 2013 with 12 saves and 38 strikeouts over 40.2 innings. A forearm injury as a sophomore limited him to 10 appearances and one save.

2015 Trinity graduate and Tiger pitcher Matt Tindall signed to play professionally with the Los Angeles Angels organization. In 2015 he also helped the Tigers reach the Division III College World Series for the first time in program history. He started in the World Series in an elimination game against Salisbury College pitching 7.2 innings with 10 strikeouts and no walks in the Tiger's 9-1 win. The win made him the first-ever winning pitcher at the D-III College World Series for Trinity. He was elected to the 2015 NCAA Baseball Championships All-Tournament team and was named 2015 All-SCAC Honorable Mention this season. For his career at Trinity he finished with a 3.39 ERA, getting 103 strikeouts and allowing only 81 hits.
